Senior Python Developer

Description

At ANCORE, we foster a culture where our people come first. We refer to our employees as 'members' to emphasize that everyone who joins us becomes a co-owner in our journey—sharing both the rewards and challenges of building a world-class business. As one of the world's largest independent firms in information technology and business process services, our continued success hinges on attracting and retaining top-tier professionals like you.

Responsibilities

- We are looking for a highly skilled Senior Python Developer to join our Enterprise Data Management (EDM) team with a focus on Treasury Data support.
- This is a critical role that bridges offshore data processing with real-time issue resolution.
- The ideal candidate will bring strong Python and SQL expertise and possess the ability to analyze reporting inconsistencies with speed and precision.
- This is not a report-building role—it's about understanding the data behind the reports and providing insight when numbers don't add up.

Qualifications

- Analytical Mindset: Investigative approach to data with ability to pinpoint root causes
- Communication Skills: Clearly explain data issues to business users and stakeholders
- Collaboration: Work closely with global data teams, especially during post-shift transitions
- Learning Curiosity: Proactive in building domain knowledge—similar to the previous role holder who successfully mastered EDM systems
- Proficient in writing and optimizing complex queries for large datasets
- Ability to interpret visual dashboards and trace data anomalies
- Strong scripting and debugging skills, especially in data processing tasks

Education

Bachelor's degree in computer science, Engineering, or related field. Masters preferred, or Minimum 5+ years in Python development with strong SQL background and exposure to business data reporting environments.
